About Your Speaker

Matthew Krouwel MBSCH

London College of Clinical Hypnosis
Dietary Disorders, Obesity and Hypnosis

Matthew Krouwel is an expert on the use of clinical hypnosis with weight control and dietary disorders. He graduated from Keele University in 1996, where he first became interested in psychotherapies and then completed his training at the prestigious London College of Clinical Hypnosis. His work as a practitioner led him into the ever more significant area of obesity and dietary disorders and Mathew decided to train as a nutritionist and qualified as a non-medical nutritionist with the VCTC (Vocational Charitable Training Trust) in 2003. Today he is a specialist in both fields and has developed practical applications of both skills to increase the effectiveness of both.

During his years of practice he has worked with everyone from professional models to housewives. He is currently working as a nutritional consultant for one of the highest profile corporations in the world, in association with a number of celebrities.

In addition to weight control work he has extensive experience with bulimia, compulsive eating and anorexia.

Currently he is working on a book to promote healthier eating aimed at the general public and one aimed at hypnotherapists to increase their effectiveness in this area.
